Delighted Presidency is Over--Wilson

BRAZIL CHIEF INSPIRATION FOR SPEECH

PAN-AMERICAN PEACE
DELEGATES ATTEND
DINNER.
U. S. EXECUTIVE
FIRST SPEAKER
Says Expressing Feeling Of Great Nation Is Delicate Task.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Paris, May 27.—"It is very delicious, for one thing, if I may say so, to know that my presidency is not ahead of me and that his presidency is ahead of him," said President Pessoa in referring to Dr. Epitacio Pessoa president-elect of Brazil at the dinner given by Dr. Pessoa by the Pan-American peace delegation last night.
"The honor has been accorded me," President Wilson said in beginning his making of the speech tonight.
"I want to say that I feel very much at home in this company, though after all I suppose no one of us feels thoroughly at home except on the other side of the water. We all feel in a very real sense that we have a common home because we live in the atmosphere of the same conceptions, and I think with the same political ambitions and principles."

Plays Respects to Pessoa
"I am particularly glad to have the opportunity of paying my respects to Mr. Pessoa and the purpose of my speech is to pay to him and every earnestness, and yet I cannot, if I may judge by my own experience, expect for him a very great scholarship in the performance of the duties of his office, because after all, to be the head of an American state is a task of unrelieved responsibility."

"American conditions as a rule put us under the highest sort upon the president, and so much of the responsibility of affairs of state is centered upon him, that his years of office are not to be years of little weighting with anxiety, a little burdened with the sense of the obligation of speaking for his people, speaking what they really think and endeavoring to accomplish what they really desire."

Presidency Is Delicate Task
"I suppose no more delicate task is given any man than to interpret the feelings and the purpose of a great people. I know that if I may speak for myself, the chief anxiety I have had has been to be the true interpreter of a national sentiment, and something more than to be able to express the general spirit of a nation."

"And a nation looks to its president to do that, and the responsibility of an event so like this does not consist merely of the sense of neighborhood.
We are neighbors. We have always been friends. But that is all old something. I am sure that I can put it into words, there has been added to the common principles which have united the American time out of mind and which the world has accepted, that the world has accepted, that there has been a thrill of hope and of expectation throughout the nations of the world which somehow seems to have sprung up and in the things we always believed in. It is as if the pure waters of the fountains we had always drunk from had been put to the lips of all peoples and they have drunk and are refreshed."

Democracy Spreads in America
"And it is a delightful thought to believe that these are fountains which sprang up and in the things we always believed in. I am not of course, suggesting or believing that political liberty had its birth in the American hemisphere, but the peculiar expression of it in the United States is worthy of them. I am not of course, suggesting or believing that political liberty had its birth in the American hemisphere, but the peculiar expression of it in the United States is worthy of them. I am not of course, suggesting or believing that political liberty had its birth in the American hemisphere, but the peculiar expression of it in the United States is worthy of them."

Points Out Moral
"My moral from that recollection is this: we, among other things, are responsible of the United States, to do that very thing. I was urging that other states of America unite with the United States in doing something which closely resembled the formation of the present nation of nations.
I was ambitious to have the American to the thing first and set the example to the world."

Edinburgh, Scotland, May 27.—
Harry G. Hawker and Lieut. Commander Mackenzie Grieve, who were rescued by the Danish ship Mary after the airplane in which they were attempting to cross the Atlantic had sighted in mid-ocean, arrived here this morning on their way to London from Paris, where they were landed by a British warship yesterday.

PEACE —and— WAR

Germany's counter proposals to the peace terms submitted by the peace conference by Count von Brookhoff-Rantzau, chief of the German peace mission tomorrow, according to the press here.

It is expected the reply of the enemy representatives will be elaborate and voluminous. The fact that the peace conference has been formed in the German delegation that no further extension of time is to be asked would seem to indicate that the documents to be turned over tomorrow will be Germany's last word before making a definite attitude toward the terms of peace. Dispatches seem to reflect quite a sharp division of sentiment among the Germans as to whether the terms should be signed.
It was announced last week that the terms to be presented to Austria would be considered at a plenary session today. Since that time, however, the delay has been occasioned by the difficulty of framing the section dealing with reparations. A portion of the terms, however, may be ready for presentation before the end of the present week.

While there have been rumors that the ill-Russian government at Omsk, headed by Admiral Kolchak is to receive recognition from the allies, there has been no confirmation of this report. It is indicated there are certain guarantees demanded as a condition to the recognition of the Omsk regime.

(By Special Correspondent)
Leavenworth, May 27.—Coming in contact with a live electric wire caused a boy of 14 from the top of a telephone ployed by the telephone company and was mounted on the pole fixing the wires on the south side of the lake when the accident happened.

Mr. Praner was 19 years old. He and stood, is considering favorably a pro-

Lonely Boy Searching For Family

A lonesome boy in a navy uniform spent today in Janesville in search of his mother, father, two brothers, and a sister. He failed to find any trace of his family from whom he has not heard since he enlisted in the navy more than a year ago.
The lad's name is Leon Sweet. He was committed to the orphanage home at Sparta a number of years ago and later was sent to live at the home of E. Dixon, Dalton.
The address of his mother which he had was 225 South Franklin street.
He found no such number on that street. His father, John Sweet, is supposed to have been living in Stoughton, but he has been unable to find him. His brothers are Aldon, Lawrence, and Aubrey, and his sister,
Adele Hazel.
He is now at Great Lakes but expects to leave for France next week.
He will give up the search tonight.
He requests that anyone having any information which might be of help in locating his family, write to E. Dixon, Dalton, Wis.

Expects to Land By Night
With Commander A. C. Read confident he would reach the coast of Portugal before darkness tonight, thus achieving the coveted honor of making the first trans-Atlantic flight, United States seaplane N. C. 4, started for Lisbon this morning at 6:15 a. m.,
New York time.

The crew of the seaplane which was the same as that which made the memorable flight from New Foundland, boarded the plane an hour before sunrise, but it was not until several hours later that the giant machine taxied outside the breakwater, headed to the westward and circled slowly into the air.

The din of the salute was kept up for several minutes as the plane meanwhile disappeared in the eastern sky.
Weather Almost Perfect
The weather was almost perfect.
Weather experts predicted that the plane might encounter some cloudy midway of the course, but this was not expected to interfere with her progress.

Commander Read intends to remain in Lisbon over night and start for Plymouth, England, tomorrow morning, weather permitting.

The course between here and Portugal is about 1,400 miles. American democracy, stretched out along to guide the plane.

N. C. 4 Sole Survivor
On a successful voyage the United States seaplane N. C. 4, from Ponta Delgada to Lisbon today depended the completion of the trans-Atlantic flight started from Trepanay,
New Foundland, May 19. This seaplane was the only survivor of the three that essayed the trip.

The United States naval seaplanes N.
C. 1, N. C. 3, and N. C. 4, started from Rockaway Point, New York, May 8, on the preliminary leg of their flight to Halifax, reaching there in safety. "The N. C. 4, however, encountered engine trouble and was forced to alight on the beach off Chatham, Nova Scotia.
Towed in to the harbor and repairs were rushed there and the machine was put in shape to continue its voyage."

On May 14, the N. C. 4, left Chatham and arrived at Halifax in safety.
The next day it continued its flight to Trepanay, N. P., where it joined the N. C. 1 and N. C. 3, which had reached Trepanay, May 16.

Left Trepanay May 16.
The three seaplanes left Trepanay,
May 16, on their trip to the Azores and the N. C. 4 arrived at Ponta Del-gada on the next day, having been in the air 13 hours. The N. C. 1 lost her way in a fog and her crew was picked up by a Greek steamer and taken to the Azores, the plane being lost.
The N. C. 3, after losing her engines, alighted on the sea, from which Commander Towers, in charge of the craft, was unable to rise. After being missing for 52 hours, the N. C.
3 entered the harbor of Ponta Del-gada, Azores, under her own power.
She was so badly battered by the seas she encountered however, that she was retired from the contest, leaving the N. C. 4 to continue the flight.

The naval official in charge of the N. C. 4 is Lieut. Commander Albert Cushing Read, who is accompanied by five companions.

From Ponta Delgada to Lisbon is approximately 750 miles.

BAFFLING CHINESE MURDER CASE IS BROUGHT TO END

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Shanghai, May 27.—One of the most remarkable murder cases in the history of the world, the case of the Chinese revolutionary leader, Sun Yat-sen, has been brought to a conclusion. The extraordinary phase of the case was the fact that Hing was first sentenced to life imprisonment, but appealed to the supreme court of China, which reversed the verdict and sentenced him to death. The execution of Sun Yat-sen for the killing of Sung Chiao-chen.

The new garroting machine for the execution of Sun Yat-sen was used for the first time in Hing's case. Its work was effective but done in so ghastly a fashion that the executioners left the room without ceremony.

The murder of Sung Chiao-chen was considered a political crime. Sung formerly was minister of agriculture and commerce and, when he was assassinated on the platform of a railway station at Shanghai in 1913, was a candidate for the presidency. He was one of the leaders of the southern party opposed to Yuan Shi-kai, who then was provisional president of China.

The premier of Yuan's government, Cao Ping-chen, was alleged to have been one of the instigators of Sung's murder, but he died in a tragic suicide. Two others alleged to have actually killed Sung were arrested but died mysteriously before being placed on trial.

This left Hing alone to solve the mystery. For several years he kept away from Shanghai but during the war returned here disguised as a monk and even appeared in court in a disguise under some pretense. He was recaptured by the son of Sung, was arrested and, six years after the crime, has been executed for it.

DRY ENFORCEMENT BILL UP THIS WEEK; SUBSTITUTE O. K'ED

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Madison, May 27.—The senate is expected to pass on the dry enforcement measure this week. The senate committee on state affairs is expected to report the dry enforcement bill to the senate Wednesday. At last week's session of the senate the Bennett dry enforcement bill was recalled from committee and a substitute measure was offered and the bill was then sent back to the committee for further consideration.

The substitute bill which has been offered has the approval of the Wisconsin Anti-Saloon League. It provides that the attorney general shall be ex-officio prohibition commissioner of the state. The bill does not recognize three percent beer, but does provide for the sale of medicinal wine. The bill may be sold in the state under a license from the attorney general. This official has power, however, to revoke the license of any person whose name or address is being sold primarily for the alcoholic contents of the article.

The Wisconsin Anti-Saloon League is confident that the dry enforcement bill which they advocate will pass the senate. A similar bill was defeated in the house after an amendment had been incorporated into it. The amendment was to a vote of the people at the November election in 1920. The dry forces will make their fight against any referendum feature, claiming that the question of enforcing the law is not one which is necessarily subject to referendum. The wet forces will attempt to incorporate into the bill a provision permitting the sale and manufacture of percent beer in the state as a non-intoxicant. There is also a provision in the measure providing that in case the 18th amendment to the federal constitution is declared illegal by the United States supreme court then the present regulatory laws shall remain enforced.

CLARK FAMILY HAS UNUSUAL WAR RECORD

Harry and Charles Clark, sons of Dr. C. B. Clark, former Janesville resident, have arrived in this country with the 33rd division and will arrive in Camp Grant tomorrow. Word has also been received from Dr. Clark, a major in the medical corps, who is stationed at St. Nazaire, France, in charge of the base hospital located at that point.

The Clark family has an unusual record in war activities. At the beginning of the war, father and the two sons immediately enlisted. Charles Clark was a local high school student and gained considerable prominence by his activity in athletics, especially football.

Mrs. Clark also was engaged in war work at Camp Bowie, Texas, where she served as a hostess house worker. Dr. Clark was stationed at Camp Bowie for a short time after his enlistment. He went overseas with the 36th division.

Major Clark is at present stationed at St. Nazaire, a point of embarkation, and is responsible for the health of between 30,000 and 40,000 American soldiers. He has a large staff of doctors and nurses under his supervision.

In a recent letter to his mother, a Walworth resident, Major Clark describes his work clearly and says that he soon hopes to be back in the U. S. A.

The Clark boys will be discharged during Camp Grant by Wednesday and will be welcomed home at Walworth. Mrs. Clark is expected to arrive from Camp Bowie, Texas, to join in the homecoming.

VENEREAL DISEASE DANGERS ARE TOLD BY HEALTH WORKER

A straight out talk on the dangers of venereal diseases, and the determined fight the state board of health is putting up against them, was given by Miss Martha B. Riley, Madison, yesterday afternoon at a women's meeting held in the library. An appropriation of $25,000 from the national government and the same amount from the state, furnish funds whereby an effective health worker could be used in working against these diseases, she said. Half the fund was to be expended in clinics where free treatment could be given and the other half in public education, she declared.

Part of the funds are to be spent in education, which includes the lecturing, literature slides, and other means. Miss Riley showed that a large percentage of the insane, feeble minded and blind children were infected by these diseases which they had inherited from their parents. These diseases were dangerous and communicable diseases, and yet they were allowed to be at large to infect others.

Blames ignorance
Ignorance in these matters was to blame for a large share in the spread of these diseases, she claimed, and it was this ignorance of the danger of them which the state was trying to overcome by its determined plan of education. The state forces women's clubs, women's organizations, church groups, and schools were all included in the outline as announced by Miss Riley.

A large display of posters was on display at the meeting. The principal for a number of years, has also been in the government service as a social worker, and probation officer at Madison for a long period. In answer to queries she said that Madison had at this time about 20 paid workers doing social service, which included besides the health officer, three paid nurses, two school nurses, a county nurse, and various others in different lines. A recent addition to the judicial body was a court of domestic relations, which is about to be opened.

Stays Here Today
Miss Riley received permission of the bureau at Madison to remain in Janesville today and she is to put in the afternoon in the city, looking into factory conditions and matters affecting working women in Janesville.

An effective committee on streets and alleys has been working quietly along these lines. Mrs. H. H. Faust has been chairman and her committee consists of one woman from each ward. They are: First ward, Mrs. Henry Hansen; Second ward, Mrs. Peter Kuhn; Third ward, Mrs. Mary Mowat; Fourth ward, Mrs. J. J. Dulin; Fifth ward, Mrs. J. J. Dulin. Two boys from the eighth grades are appointed in each ward to cooperate in reporting bad conditions. The committee on streets and alleys from the city council, of which J. J. Dulin is chairman, will be working as doing splendid service on their own initiative. Both committees request any who wish to make complaints on accumulations of garbage or other matters affecting cleanliness and health to report to any of the committee or to Mr. Dulin. Fred Webb, the health officer is also rounding up objectionable cases and insisting on the observance of health ordinances in regard to ashes and garbage.

The exodus of prospectors brings to mind the famous rich strikes of the early days. Hundreds of men are leaving on every boat for Alaska, via the Inside Passage, taking their chances on staking some rich ground. The strike was made, say reports, on old diggings on the Alaska side of the Alaska-British Columbia boundary. The ground is quartz formation. Practically all prominent claims have been staked.

H. S. STUDENTS HEAR
TALKS ON VALUE
OF GOOD HEALTH

Miss Martha B. Riley, of the state board of health, began her address at the high school Monday afternoon by telling of the perfect physical condition of the girls who served as Red Cross nurses over there. She said, that they had learned the secret of strength—storing up energy.

"Every girl in high school and college should pledge herself to perfect physical womanhood," she said. "First is regular hours of sleep, not 10 hours one night and four the next, but a set number of hours for each night. Second a change of work is as good as a rest. Vary your work during the day and you will feel less worn out by night. Your eating has much to do with making you physically fit. Eat lots of green things, less meat, and more fruit. Bathe daily. You will feel more comfortable and healthy if you do. Be particular about your posture. Sit, stand, walk erectly."

Compliments Girls on Dress.

Miss Riley complimented the girls on their clothes (most of them were middie, or plain, gingham dresses). She was strong in her denunciation of low necked dresses and artificial complexions.

In closing she said, "Good health is your asset. If you are healthy you will be more popular, more companionable, more independent and level-headed."

Then she touched on the war which this state is waging against venereal diseases. She told how the problem was handled in the army, and the amount of money the state has to spend on clinics, advertising, and education. Then she emphasized the harm which these diseases have wrought among innocent people.

At the end of her address Miss Riley passed out pamphlets issued by the state entitled "On Guard" which treat of the social disease problem.

Dr. Clark Addresses Boys.

Dr. W. T. Clark, Janesville, addressed the high school boys yesterday afternoon on personal hygiene.

Dr. Clark spoke to the boys in the assembly room, while Miss Riley, spoke on the same subject to the girls in the gym.

Dr. Clark told of the value of good health and the efforts which should be made to preserve it. He emphasized cleanliness as one of the main qualities and also plenty of exercise to keep the body in a fit condition.

He also emphasized the dangers of youths of high school age contracting social diseases and warned them of its effects. At the close of his talk, Dr. Clark passed out pamphlets issued by the state, on the subject.

Blind Girl's
Knitting Causes
Yankee Surprise

More than one soldier has worn a now wearing a Red Cross sweater from this city, the real and intrinsic value of which is not known by the wearer. They are made by a blind girl, Miss Caroline Palmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Palmer, 427 Logan street.

During the period of hostilities the blind girl knitted many sweaters and even state Red Cross home service officials agree, the product from her hands had no equal. Her latest sweaters were brought to the county chapter recently and when shown several soldiers, all expressed great amazement at the care and fineness of the work. The "purling" of the collar, shoulder and edges was perfect and careful scrutiny failed to reveal a single "drop-stitch."

Say if I had that sweater and knew a blind girl had knitted it, there isn't a cootie mill officer in the army who could take it away from me," declared one overseas man. It being explained that the military being explained that the military hands had no equal. Her latest sweaters were brought to the county chapter recently and when shown several soldiers, all expressed great amazement at the care and fineness of the work. The "purling" of the collar, shoulder and edges was perfect and careful scrutiny failed to reveal a single "drop-stitch."

"We got a pile of knitted goods across, one had to look about five and a half to know whether it was a sweater, or a shawl or a pair of wristlets. That beats any sweater I ever saw and to think it was knitted by a blind girl would make it a souvenir of the war worth more than any Boche iron cross."

Given in honor of the seniors by the juniors, the affair is looked forward to eagerly each year by the upper classmen. Members of the high school faculty, including Prin. and Mrs. George Bassford, will act as chaperones.

THE WISHING PLANE

“How would you children like to go to France?” asked Captain Brave when Jack and Jane came downstairs for breakfast in Dr. Cheer’s house the next morning.
“We would like to awfully well,” said both children at once. “Just as soon as I can get the machine tuned up a little, and Ladydear can get your things packed,” said the Captain. The children ran away to tell Dr.

Of course they all felt sorry to leave Beautiful Island and Dr. Cheer, because they had had such a wonderful time, but they realized they couldn’t stay there for ever and ever, and so with many goodbyes and a few tears on Jane’s part at having to leave her Dr. Cheer and the pretty land, they finally got started on the journey to France.
They flew all morning and part of the afternoon without seeing anything but the ocean far below them and the sky overhead.
Boon was in the little room of the plane when the airplane started and when the children looked around for him late in the afternoon he was still there, sound asleep on his little pillow. When they woke him up he absolutely refused to be out of the least bit gay. Of course little dogs can’t talk, but if Boon could have said something he probably would have said:
“I’d like to know why we had to leave Beautiful Island. I was just getting to like those dogs and was having a fine time. Now look where I am.”
But Jack and Jane cheered him up by playing with him and making him do all his funny tricks.
“Are we going straight to France?” asked Jack of Captain Brave a little later.
“I don’t think so,” said Captain Brave. “I want you little folks to see the Azores first.”
Now you know by this time may know what the Azores are, but Jack and Jane didn’t, so they asked Captain Brave, and he said:
“The Azores are a group of islands between Europe and America, in the Atlantic ocean. It was on these islands that the American flyers stopped on their wonderful flight across the ocean.”
Jack and Jane would have liked to have heard more about these islands but just at this time Ladydear called their attention to a black spot below them on the ocean.
Captain Brave gave Ladydear the telescope—you remember I told you a few stories ago what a telescope is—and she looked once more at the

ON THE SPUR
of the MOMENT

“I WILL.”
In every man, taking them as a whole.
“That Something” lies dormant in his soul.
It consists of ambition, confidence and power.
And compels him to fight and win hour by hour.
It ousts disappointment, discouragement, and all.
And keeps him “plugging” where many men fall.
“I WILL,” which is the talisman of all success.
Lies dormant sleeping beneath your vest.
So wake it, man! Do not dare delay.
“It can be done,” though many say.
“Nay.”
Play the game well, you’ll win the fight.
To hedges with discouragements—out of sight!
Rise, fight, and win—do the best you can.
You’re no quitter, but a man, son, a man.
—D. Lewis Clinton.

Somehow or other we miss the old war. It has left an aching void in our list of all time. Last year we had a number of “wonderful” business deals in sleep to even the wife about, but, of course, they were held up by the war. The excuse was 100 per cent efficient. Now—but what’s the use?

Los Angeles Expects Thousands of Colorists

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.]
Los Angeles, May 27.—Several thousand French, Belgian andwiss colorists are expected to arrive in Los Angeles during the summer, according to the statements of philanthropic French residents who are interested in the movement. The new settlers will take up land and start farming in various parts of southern California. Their compatriots here will protect them from speculators and a special committee will perpetually prove the value of all land before it passes into the hands of the swindlers.
The colorists form the large agricultural class that fell upon evil days during the war, but many of them have saved enough from the wreck of their fortunes to attain a good start in this country.

COM. H. C. RICHARDSON.
No small amount of credit for the feat that has been accomplished by the U. S. navy planes in crossing the Atlantic ocean belongs to Commander Holden C. Richardson. Commander Richardson’s right-hand man on the construction end of the expedition was a large share, it is understood, in the design of the hull of the NC-1. He has been an aviation pilot for many years, and has been one of the men who, with Towers, developed the catapult for launching a plane from a battleship. He is a Pennsylvanian, born in 1875, and entered the naval academy in 1897. Graduating high in his class, he was assigned to construction. His first important connection with aviation came in 1912, when he was ordered to the navy yard at Washington for experimental work on naval hydroaeroplanes. He became one of the first aeronautical engineers in the country, and for the last six years, with some interruptions, has been engaged in the design and construction of seaplanes. While at the Pensacola station he was one of the first officers to risk his life in a seaplane driven for the first time by a Liberty motor. He is 41 years old.

"Gaucho!" cried Stanway then. "Scatter your men out as we ride so that we make a line a mile long when we come to the hills just across the line. "I forgot to count, senior. I should say, fifty, perhaps."

"We are twenty. That is enough. You are not coming with us?"

"I think not. Why, with so competent a leader as you, should I come also? No, I think, and he turned his horse toward the white walls of

PETEY DINK—WHEREIN THE INSTINCTS AND THE HATS GET TWISTED.

Good hunting, senior."

He turned his horse, and, sitting easily, gracefully in the deep Mexican saddle, rode away through the moonlight. Stanway, frowning after the retreating form, hesitated a moment. Then, calling sharply to Gaucho Morales, he gave his horse the spur and turned southward.

"You understand what we're doing, Gaucho?" he said sternly. "We're invading Mexico, come right down to it. We're not supposed to have any business there just now. We've got to take care of ourselves."

"Si, senior," muttered Gaucho at his side.

CHAPTER IV.

Word From the Insurrectos.

Moon paled, stars died, the east flushed to the coming of the sun before they turned back from a fruitless quest, riding again close together toward the north.

Stanway and Gaucho had kept upon the trail through the fields, the others spreading out to east and west as they rode that there might be no chance of missing the party they sought in the light.

But in an hour they had come into a country where all tracks were mingled with the hoof marks of cattle and vaqueros' ponies, and their trail was smothered and lost.

Shortly before midnight they had come upon three men, ragged, ugly-looking Mexicans, sleeping about a camp fire which was fast dying. The men knew nothing or professed at ignorance, Stanway could not tell which.

After that nothing, although they had pushed many miles into the Mexican country until they realized the utter uselessness of riding farther.

"We may as well go back, Gaucho," Stanway said at last. "They will want ransom, I suppose. When they speak we'll know what to do."

And reluctantly, his face black with the wrath upon him, Gaucho Morales called to his men to turn back.

The sunlight lay bright and warm upon the oranges and their blossoms when they rode back to the rancho. Stanway threw himself from the saddle, a bit stiff from long hours of hard riding.

Then, walking slowly now, loath to greet Teresa de la Guerra with news of their failure, he came into the patio. She was there waiting for him.

"Nothing," he blurted out. "We have found nothing."

"I know," she said quietly. She came toward him, putting out her hands. "You have been good to us, Senor Billy."

He laughed a bit awkwardly. "I don't know how," he retorted. "I have done nothing. You have not been molested here?"

She hesitated. He saw a quick frown gather her brows. Then, speaking lightly, she replied, saying:

"No. But come; you must be hungry and tired out. Coffee is ready."

He went with her to the broad-open doors.

"Torre is here?" he asked, his eyes intent upon her face.

The frown came again, and was gone quickly. But he had seen it.

"He is here, yes, Asleep, I think. He was wounded. You know?"

"He is not badly hurt?"

Her tired eyes, into which sleep had not come during the long night, grew brightly contemptuous.

"It is only his beauty which is harmed," she said swiftly.

"Good morning, prima mia!" called a deep, laughing voice. "Ah, still with us, Senor Stanway?"

Torre, debonair in the dark, youthful beauty of him, greeted them at the doorway.

"Certainly Senor Stanway is still with us," said Teresa coolly. "He is my guest, my grandfather's friend, Senor Torre!"

Torre laughed and lifted his shoulders.

"Enter," he said with a graciousness which was in some strange way vaguely insulting; it was as though he were the master here, and because of his generosity not only Stanway but the girl as well were allowed upon the premises.

Now it was Teresa who flushed.

"Come, Senor Billy," she said quietly. "We are going to have coffee together."

For the fraction of a second the two men stood fronting each other, their level eyes filled with challenge, with a mistrust which was little less than hatred.

Then the Spaniard, bowing again, turned away, with a slight smile playing under the small, pointed mustache, and Stanway followed his hostess.

Pedro himself superintended the serving of the simple breakfast.

"Senorita," Stanway said at last, pushing back his chair, "I should like to go back to the drawing room. There might be something there to give us a hint that will help us."

"Si," she said, "I had thought of that. I looked last night carefully after you had gone."

"You found nothing?"

"Nothing that I could understand," she answered quietly. "Something I could not."

He looked up at her quickly, his eyes full of question.

"This," she answered, not waiting for him to speak.

She placed a folded paper before him. He glanced at it, frowned, looked again, and turned once more to her.

"It is his will. Dated last night. But why has he made a new one?"

"Read it," as quietly as before, though her eyes were brightening with some surge of emotion he could not guess.

He ran through it hastily, skimming the lines, eager for the gist of it. And when he had found it he leaped to his feet, his hands clenched, amazement and anger mingled in his eyes.

"It is a forgery!" he cried sharply.

"No," she said, "it is his signature. And, look, to make certain I investigated. Pedro and Juana and Vidal signed the signature. That is what brought Mr. Dempton last night."

"But," he muttered heavily, "the thing is impossible! Why, he has given everything, everything to Torre! And he hated Torre more than he pretended to hate an American!"

"Yet it is his will," she reminded him. "And he is gone. And Senor Torre is here."

"Already with the air of a master!" shouted Stanway. "He was already half across the room, sheer wrath in his eyes now, the will crumpled in his hand now."

"Wait!" the girl cried, running to him, her hand upon his arm as though she would hold him back. "What are you going to do?"

"To tell him that he is no less a fool than a thief," he retorted. "That he must explain his opportune presence here as well as the disappearance of De la Guerra."

"Again I appear to eavesdrop. Again I prove the adage that he who listens hears disappointing things of himself." It was Torre leaning indolently in the doorway.

"You are going to say, senior—"

Stanway lunged the crumpled paper in front of him.

"Explain that!" he snapped. "You can't get away with a thing like this, Torre. Explain it!"

"When I have read it," replied Torre coolly, his small hand carelessly taking up the document. "Ah—" with what sounded like very genuine surprise in his tone—"it is De la Guerra's will!"

Teresa and Stanway watched him closely.

Price for 50 Years

Menasha, May 27.—One hundred prelates and priests including Bishop Rhode, Green Bay, and Bishop Kondek, Superior, took part in the golden jubilee marking the fiftieth anniversary of Father Andrew Seubert's service as a priest.

The frown came again, and was gone quickly. But he had seen it.

"He is here, yes, Asleep, I think. He was wounded. You know?"

"He is not badly hurt?"

Her tired eyes, into which sleep had not come during the long night, grew brightly contemptuous.

"It is only his beauty which is harmed," she said swiftly.

"Good morning, prima mia!" called a deep, laughing voice. "Ah, still with us, Senor Stanway?"

Torre, debonair in the dark, youthful beauty of him, greeted them at the doorway.

"Certainly Senor Stanway is still with us," said Teresa coolly. "He is my guest, my grandfather's friend, Senor Torre!"

Torre laughed and lifted his shoulders.

"Enter," he said with a graciousness which was in some strange way vaguely insulting; it was as though he were the master here, and because of his generosity not only Stanway but the girl as well were allowed upon the premises.

Now it was Teresa who flushed.

"Come, Senor Billy," she said quietly. "We are going to have coffee together."

For the fraction of a second the two men stood fronting each other, their level eyes filled with challenge, with a mistrust which was little less than hatred.

Then the Spaniard, bowing again, turned away, with a slight smile playing under the small, pointed mustache, and Stanway followed his hostess.

Pedro himself superintended the serving of the simple breakfast.

"Senorita," Stanway said at last, pushing back his chair, "I should like to go back to the drawing room. There might be something there to give us a hint that will help us."

"Si," she said, "I had thought of that. I looked last night carefully after you had gone."

"You found nothing?"

"Nothing that I could understand," she answered quietly. "Something I could not."

He looked up at her quickly, his eyes full of question.

"This," she answered, not waiting for him to speak.

She placed a folded paper before him. He glanced at it, frowned, looked again, and turned once more to her.

"It is his will. Dated last night. But why has he made a new one?"

"Read it," as quietly as before, though her eyes were brightening with some surge of emotion he could not guess.

He ran through it hastily, skimming the lines, eager for the gist of it. And when he had found it he leaped to his feet, his hands clenched, amazement and anger mingled in his eyes.

"It is a forgery!" he cried sharply.

"No," she said, "it is his signature. And, look, to make certain I investigated. Pedro and Juana and Vidal signed the signature. That is what brought Mr. Dempton last night."

"But," he muttered heavily, "the thing is impossible! Why, he has given everything, everything to Torre! And he hated Torre more than he pretended to hate an American!"

"Yet it is his will," she reminded him. "And he is gone. And Senor Torre is here."

"Already with the air of a master!" shouted Stanway. "He was already half across the room, sheer wrath in his eyes now, the will crumpled in his hand now."

"Wait!" the girl cried, running to him, her hand upon his arm as though she would hold him back. "What are you going to do?"

"To tell him that he is no less a fool than a thief," he retorted. "That he must explain his opportune presence here as well as the disappearance of De la Guerra."

"Again I appear to eavesdrop. Again I prove the adage that he who listens hears disappointing things of himself." It was Torre leaning indolently in the doorway.

"When I have read it," replied Torre coolly, his small hand carelessly taking up the document. "Ah—" with what sounded like very genuine surprise in his tone—"it is De la Guerra's will!"

Teresa and Stanway watched him closely.

Dinner Stories

"You are suffering from brain fog and ennui," announced the specialist. "You should take more interest in your business."

"I would like to," replied the patient.

"Then why don't you?" demanded the specialist.

"The law won't let me," replied the patient. "I'm a pawnbroker."

The mails from home had been received by a certain regiment. One Tommy received a large box addressed to himself, and with a triumphant yell he rushed off to his company's lines and gathered them around him to share the contents of the box.

"Smokes, lads," he cried, as he unfolded the wrapping. "From the old man, I know it, and there's sure to be a bottle or two of Scotch."

He opened the box, gave one look and collapsed in a heap. "It's from old Aunt Mary," groaned the warrior. "Bandages, an 'intment,' an embrocation, and 'Pain's' and 'Book on 'ow to be your own surgeon.'"

President Wilson is fond of telling a story about an old treasurer. This old fellow was the treasurer of the company one day.

"Me and that off horse has been working for the company 17 years, sir."

"Just so, Winterbottom, just so," said the treasurer, and he cleared his throat and added "Both treated will, I hope."

The old teamster looked dubious.

"Well," he said, "we was both taken down sick last month and they took a doctor for the horse, while they docked my pay."

CLINTON NEWS

Clinton, May 26.—Word was received Monday morning of the sudden death of Dr. William Crawford, Saturday night at his home in Chicago. Dr. Crawford and wife were residents of Clinton about five years, after his retiring from the ministry. On account of declining health they moved to Chicago a year and a half ago to be near their son. He was very prominent in the Congregational society and highly respected, being a very able minister, and also writer. They have a host of friends here who extend to Mrs. Crawford and family their sincere sympathy.

Rev. A. L. Mynt, Chicago, ably filled the pulpit of the United church, Sunday morning and evening.

What might have proved a fatal accident occurred about midnight Sunday two miles east of town. Two autos ran into each other head on driving them together so firmly it was almost impossible to get them apart. The smaller car contained two Beloit girls and gentlemen friends or Delavan who were slightly injured. Those having the larger car were not so fortunate, one man having his leg broken, and several cuts; another sprained ankle, and two others cut and bruised. They were taken to the home of Ed. Stark and doctors, summoned. After being cared for they were taken to their homes. Many went out to see the wreck Monday.

BOTH CLASSES SET FOR START OF DUAL TRACK MEET TONIGHT

Keen interest is being shown in the first half of the dual track meet between the elementary and high school classes at the Y. M. C. A. tonight. The first event is to start promptly at 8 o'clock. Each event is to follow promptly upon the finish of the preceding one. Those not on hand to start in their event will be left out.

The evening program includes six events. Each event will require four minutes to decide the three places to be given awards. All contestants are ordered to be in their suits at 8 o'clock and the clerk of the course will notify them of their heat. Following are the events in their order:

- 120 yd. dash (preliminary).
- 500 yd. run (preliminary).
- 120 yd. hurdle (preliminary).
- 350 yd. run (preliminary).
- 120 yd. hurdles (finals).
- 250 yd. dash (preliminary).
- 350 yd. run (finals).
- 250 yd. hurdle (finals).

The events promise to be close and interesting. There is much speculation as to which team will win the honors. The hardest places to pick in figuring the advance odds is the second and third. Most of the lads are sure of who will win first in most of the events. The 120 yd. dash it looks like will be won by Ronald Smith and the 500 yd. run by Fred Graesslin. Although Raubacher's team into Fred Graesslin should show strong in this event. That event is one of the doubtful ones. The 120 yd. hurdle is another that has four strong contestants in Grubb and Newtender. The 120 yd. hurdle event looks as though it would go to Powers of the high class although Graf and Pullman of the employed boys will make him hustle and may prove to be a dark horse. Barriage is also a contender.

The 350 yd. dash should be one of the best events with Ewing and Feltle the strong contenders and Doss and Palmer as unknown quantities. This gives both classes a hope for first place with the odds in favor of Feltle of the employed boys.

The 250 yd. dash is another doubtful one, although from the way McCusky works when he runs it looks as though the rest would have to step to beat him. Ewing, his brother, and Grubbs are all pretty evenly matched, so that the race is about a toss-up.

The high school class has two favorites in the 250 yd. hurdles with Phil Smith and Dick, but J. Casey and Feltle of the other class will be there to push them, and are sure to land a place.

Points are to be awarded for the first three places being scored as follows: Five points for first place, three for second and one for third. The class with the greatest number of points at the close of the Friday night event will win the meet. Spectators will be admitted to the main floor of the gymnasium as the events will all be held on the track.

Officials are as follows: Referee and Referee, Physical Director, W. P. Crab; Clerk of Course, Ernest Rost; Starter, Al. Hubert; Timekeeper, Milton Ray; Tom Sprague; Hubert Roy; Custodian of Prizes, Austin Sprague; Timers, Kenneth Spoon, Leon Griffith.

OLYMPICS WIN FROM HARMONY, 5 TO 3

The Olympics invaded Harmony Sunday and brought home the bacon. With Hanning catching and Meyer doing mound duty it was an easy 5 to 3 victory for the Gas House nine.

With the Olympic sluggers broke away and retired with two more runs. Anderson's clever catch in the ninth inning prevented a run for the visitors.

Next Sunday the Olympics will play the strong Willowdale nine. A hard game is expected but with Allen back in the box and Kohn behind the bat, the Olympics hope to make it their eighth straight victory.

The Olympics issue a challenge to any local or out-of-town team. Any team desiring a game should write or phone W. Anderson.

ATLANTIC CITY WANTS 1920 ROTARY MEETING

Atlantic City, May 27.—From all parts of the United States and Canada comes assurance that the movement launched by the fifth district of Rotary to land the 1920 convention of the International Association of Rotary Clubs for Atlantic City, has gained momentum and will result in selection of the resort following the Salt Lake City convention in June.

It is contended by those back of the movement to bring the international convention east next year, that in view of the strenuous period of reconstruction in every line of endeavor, it is necessary to follow the signing of peace terms, the 1920 convention should be a "convention of recreation," as well as for the consideration of those principles which have served to make Rotary the live organization it is.

The fifth district is basing its claim for the 1920 meeting on Mexico, as it is offering to put on an international convention to be held in this section. In 1917 the south had the convention in Atlanta. The middle west entertained the Rotarians in 1918 at Kansas City. The far west will be the host to the clubs at Salt Lake City next month.

Mexican Airplane Making Progress

Washington, May 27.—Progress of airplane manufacture in Mexico is attracting the attention of officials here. The national factory on the outskirts of Mexico City has reached a production of one complete machine a week.

The motor developed by the Mexican engineers is known as the Aztatl. It is rated at 80 horsepower and is described as "light, cheap and serviceable." Steps have been taken toward the construction of aerial bombs and the Mexican government is said to plan the building of armored planes this year.

Marine Worthy of the Name! He Was a Janesville Hero

(By Louis French)

"He was a marine worthy of the name." This tribute was paid to a Second division soldier whom all Janesville and Rock county is certain to be proud of in unstinted quantity, for the soldier is a Janesville man.

I had been ordered from army headquarters at Bordeaux, to report back to my regiment, which at that time was stationed north of Chaumont on the Marne river. Army red tape and alleged shortage of officers forced otherwise with the result that I landed in Saint Albans, New York, the Camp of Agony shortly before New Year's. The first week was a mixture of rain, more rain and then mud and still more mud. One day it rained a little harder than the other. If ever the allied powers wanted a fitting and just punishment for the Potsdam machine army "Agony" veterans would say life imprisonment at the "Flat-foot farm" area of evacuation.

Nothing like To Do. For the first week I was assigned to a billet near the Noyer road. There were 25 soldiers quartered there and the others were all of the "doughboy" service, combat men, who had been unfortunate enough to have been sent from hospitals, from wounds received in action. There were machine gunners, trench mortar men, and plain "doughboys", all of whom would relate with truth of the indescribable late with truth of "getting a Hun." There was nothing to do but listen to the rain, curse the mud, swear at the chow and pray for evacuation orders.

The popular diversion was "shock-trooping" as the boys called spinning yarns of the war and action. There were four or five Second division marines in the billet. "We were all talking about brave soldiers and deeds. One night when a little private with three service and a wound chevrons entered the assembly into attention with the simple statement of:

"He was a marine worthy of the name," the speaker had a mark scar-ing across his cheek bone, the lobe of one ear gone, but still his temper and spirit was as fiery as his red, tumbled thatch of wire hair. He mentioned no names.

Yes sir, I soldiered with that lad in Haiti," he started. "He was a plain buck in those days, quiet and reserved, but he could hit any caco" and running through those jungles and their bolt knives never frightened him. He went up against Fort Liberté, and after a pretty hot advance and skirmish, we took the oldest fort on the island. He was made a sergeant.

First Troops Across. "We were the first American troops across and he was one of the first to land. During our training in the S. O. S. he volunteered to take his self education with the British and French in active service. So he saw service with both armies in the trenches and mud of Flanders and Belgium, before we came back in time for Cantigny and he had me working one of the pivot guns. He bullied us, he petted us and he led us. He knew a machine gun. He could take one apart, assemble it and fire it with his eyes blindfolded, and our experiences in Haiti came in good stead even in the position fighting."

We all lighted fresh cigarettes for we knew the story had just started. Then came Chau-Thierry and the big smash. We went into action and our machine gun platoon stayed in position for 27 straight days. We didn't eat, nor sleep, just fought day and night. But every bullet was a block for Fritz getting to Paris. That had hung to a machine and he clicked off enough Germans to notch up a 320 m. m. railway rifle, let alone a machine gun. The line got thin, but we held on until the 26th turned the tide. Becomes "Second Look"

"He became a second look for his bravery and was cited. The gold bar never changed him. He was no shavetail, but a fighter and a man. During the Saint Mihiel and the chase, he took his turn at the gun and if we didn't eat, he didn't sleep. The same with sleep. Then the bloody old Argonne forest and Meuse river, and he never stopped a bit. The coots, rats, mud, and arth never stopped him nor soured his spirit. He was cited again and given his silver bar."

The whole regiment wondered about him. We all concluded Krupp never made a gun with his number and no Fritz had his initials on either a rifle, whizzbang, or machine gun. When the rest of us would be digging in like mad to escape the steel, he would be up and around feeling everyone was under cover, and then, I am telling you, he would rush around with a little kodak trying to get a "close-up" of a breaking shell. He was always after a good view of "I can" shoveling the rest of us in the shell holes.

"He had the Grace of God and Dumb Fool luck. He had been cited a couple more times as liaison officer. He would crawl out to any wounded marine or soldier with a drink or cigarette and he never had to order us to do anything, for he knew his business and never once lost his nerve or judgment. Now I claim the 5th and 8th marines had some brave men, but this chap is my pick as the bravest of them all, bar none."

Goes Over 16 Times. "He had gone through every important action and believe he had gone over 16 different times and had been a scratch. The last I heard he had gone on 'liberty' to Chalons and when riding a horse, a lumbering old French cannon came along and ran him down, injuring his severely. He had been wounded several times, but he refused to admit they were severe enough to keep him away from action."

As the little marine stopped I asked him what company the lieutenant ant belonged. He told me the 15th. Then I asked what state the man in question hailed from and he replied, "He is a Badger." I spoke the name, "Lieut. Victor F. Bleasdale," and the marine looked a bit startled and answered, "Yes, that's the man." He had heard Lieut. Bleasdale had died from the effects of the accident, but later we learned this to be untrue.

It is also worthy of consideration of Janesville and Rock county that Hector Bleasdale, a younger brother of the marine is a D. S. C. medal. He is now at Fort Sheridan recovering from wounds of an H. E. They are the only two brothers in the A. E. F. to both hold the D. S. C. medal, the highest citation for bravery with the exception of the Congressional medal. Both were educated in Janesville schools.

Bible Sent by German Girl. Rhineland, May 27.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Amundson of this city, have just received a small pocket Bible, which was carried by their son, Alban Amundson. The son was killed in France and the Bible which was found along the roadside was sent to the parents by a German girl.

SIDE TALKS —By— RUTH CAMERON

SOME IMMORTAL GAMES.

A little boy came to our house last fall who was nine years old and yet had never in his life played or owned one of the games with which the ordinary child from five to 15 and sometimes to 50 or 60 whistles away so much time.

I shall never forget how delighted he was when we introduced him to that king of childhood games, par-ticularly potent to me, and the sight of the faded old board itself is almost painfully poignant with its power to bring back all sorts of happy memories of rainy afternoons, on which dear uncle joined us in a well thought out game of checkers, when in the happy circle of the light from the big old-fashioned lamp with the yellow shade, father or mother or big brother condescended to join us children in a game.

Some of the Next Best Games. That was our small guest's favorite, as it is with all children at first, but back gammon and checkers, Halma and Go-Bing. Authors and letters soon were close rivals, and we have passed the ancient favorite by now.

When his mother came to take him home he cried at the thought of parting from the parches board. Since the remnants of our old board are dedicated to happy memories and to the usage of our younger guests, we could not give that to him but so-laced his tears by the promise of one on his birthday. His mother was de-lighted with his interest. "I don't know why I never happened to buy him any of the old games," she said; "he's got a new kind of a baseball game that his uncle gave him and one or two others like that, but I never happened to think of those old-fashioned ones and they'd be such a help."

He Got Them All in a Lump. We have since heard that on his birthday and on Christmas she re-mitted her defect with the lavishness of the modern parent.

A case like that, where a child has never had any of the older games, is very unusual, but I do feel that many parents do not realize the vast possibilities of these simple old games, both for employing those idle minutes for which a certain undesirable someone is supposed to have such a greedy eye, and as an educative influence.

No Home Should Be Without It. The old game of letters or ana-grama, as it is sometimes called, which was a favorite in our family with old and young, is perfectly wonderful to teach spelling and enlarge the vocabulary, to say nothing of its effect in stimulating mental activity.

And as all the layout needed is simply some cardboard letters which can be bought for a small sum, or manufactured at home, surely no home "should be without it."

Besides these games played with special outfits there are many games that do not need any outfit at all, the in which of which I should think would be invaluable to parents for such times as rainy days and convalescences. Some good book filled with such suggestions is another thing which no home should be without. If you do not happen to know of one I will be glad to tell anyone who sends me a stamped envelope the name of an excellent book which I myself use.

JANES PRACTICE TO INVADE FOOTVILLE FRIDAY AFTERNOON

The Lawrence Lunch Janes will have their toughest battle so far this year when they run up against the Footville White Sox at Footville, Friday afternoon. If they can cop from the boys in the western village they are as good as any semi-pro team in this section.

Local fans have seen what Footville can do. They saw the Blackhaws unmercifully slaughtered by them last week Sunday at the fair grounds and fully recognize their strength. Efforts are being made by Manager Murphy to get a good sized crowd of rooters to invade Footville, Friday. With a little noisy support forthcoming, the Janes should win.

The Janes will polish up the rough spots in their playing in two practices this week, tonight and Thursday evening. They will indulge in practice with the C. M. & St. P. nine at the fair grounds tonight.

Adams School Nine is Victor Over St. Mary's

Playing with only five men, the Adams school team defeated the St. Mary's school nine at the second ward diamond by a score of 14 to 13 in a seven-inning game.

Sport Snap Shots

By JACK KRENE

You no doubt have lamped that the Cincinnati Reds are plunging along the National league highway at a 1-2-3 gait.

In itself, is not unusual for the Redlegs early in the season. Terrific batting spurts, a spell of effective hurling, and the Reds were off to burn up the circuit for a few weeks in years gone by. Then they fell away to their real gait and a lowly berth.

But the situation is different this spring. True, the team is hitting well and the pitchers are holding up the defense nobly, but the main factor in the glowing deeds of the team is the old John J. P. Pop, the new leader, Pat Moran, has put into the outfit.

Everybody who knows Pop is aware of the fact that he gets the most out of a player. The question which bobbed up when Pat bobbed into Cincinnati was whether he could get the maximum pep and fire into a huddled and peevish team.

Ireland in its light for freedom may well point to Pat as one of the leaders who has shown his ability to govern men. He has the Reds going right guns.

It isn't a slave-driving system, he has, Cincinnati isn't a calmer, more sympathetic gent than that. But he gets the capabilities of every player and gets the most out of him. Moran's ability to handle pitchers has helped him. He knows absolutely what shape a pitcher is in before he sends him into the box. On the offensive he knows the idiosyncrasies of his own batters and the opposing hurlers.

A. E. F. Men Protest Fight
Coblenz, May 25, via Paris, May 26. A petition protesting against the heavy weight championship fight between the American army of occupation and the German army of occupation.

The petition originated in the 18th infantry, which includes many professional boxers. The protest is not against prize fighting. It is aimed at the men who are to battle for the championship.

The soldiers believe the stuff that flows through the veins of Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey lacks the rich red color that a regimental flag warrior should have. They charge that Willard refused to help the Red Cross by boxing at exhibitions, and they assert Dempsey is a draft evader.

Jeffries Watches Willard
Los Angeles, Cal., May 27.—Jess Willard, champion heavyweight boxer, did not leave here yesterday for Toledo, as he had announced he would, but will leave tonight. A motion picture film in which he appeared was not satisfactory and had to be retaken. James J. Jeffries, former heavyweight champion, yesterday for the first time watched Willard work out, and expressed the opinion Willard was in shape to give a good account of himself July 4 when he meets Jack Dempsey.

Tennis Star Hurts Arm
New York, May 27.—Vincent Richards, youthful tennis star, who was reinstated after having been suspended from competition because of his connection with a sporting goods concern, tore a ligament in his arm Sunday when he attempted to carry him to a tournament at New Rochelle. According to his physician, his injury will keep him from the courts for a month.

DANES IN SCHLESWIG ARE SUBJECTED TO HUNGER, SAYS GOSSE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
London, May 27.—While the attention of the allies is concentrated on the German army of occupation, the Danes, who have the consent of the entente, from shipping food to their own needy countrymen in Schleswig.

This information has been received here by Edmund Gosse, well-known English literary critic.

"I learn, he said in a letter to the Morning Post, 'that the burghmaster of Flensburg declares that the hungry inhabitants of that town, the largest in Schleswig, have no need of Danish food.'"

The same German official, according to Mr. Gosse's information has refused passports to any families in the town and district of Flensburg to cross over into Denmark to accept an offer of Jutland and Pomerania to receive several thousand Danish-speaking Schleswig children.

"If Danes in Flensburg dislike German rule," he puts it, "they may starve."

Mr. Gosse terms as "scandalous" the treatment of Schleswig soldiers repatriated through Denmark.

DRINKING ORGIES PREVAIL IN VIENNA

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS.]
Vienna, May 27.—While the fate of Austria is being decided at Paris, Vienna is the scene of the wildest orgies of drinking, gambling and dancing.

The wealthy class is showing the utmost apathy over the outcome of the peace negotiations.

The restaurants are crowded at night with fashionably dressed women after drinking and dancing. The tawdry crowds gather in the gambling halls to spend the rest of the night playing games of chance.

These gambling places are frequently raided by soldiers and large sums of money are confiscated.

While this gaiety is current upon the surface there are 150,000 unemployed who spend the days wandering through the streets seeking work and bread.

All eyes are turned on Berlin anxiously waiting to see whether the German sign the treaty or throw the country into bolshevism.

BUY TIRE MILEAGE AND SAVE MONEY

For $5.00 more than the price of a cheap, unguaranteed tire that you know nothing at all about, we will sell you a guaranteed tire made by a reputable maker and guaranteed to give you 2500 miles more than the so-called cheap tires.

Mrs. Ward Tells How Yanks Wrote Brilliant Page in Military Annals

BY MRS. HUMPHRY WARD.

We drove down diagonally through the Marne salient as it was last summer after the German break-through on the Marne, to Dormans, and so across the river. In the darkening afternoon we passed over the Montagne de Rheims, and crossed the Valley of the Andre, near the spot where the Nineteenth British division, in the German attack of last June, put up so splendid a fight in defense of an important position commanding the valley—the Montagne de Bligny—that the general of the Fifth French army, General de Mitry, under whose orders they were, wrote to General Haig: "They have enabled us to establish a barrier against which the hostile waves have broken and shattered themselves. This none of the French who witnessed it will ever forget."

For if the Montagne de Bligny had gone the French position on the Montagne de Rheims, southwest of Rheims, and the cathedral city itself would have been endangered, no less than by the attack on the northeast of the town, which General Gouraud a month later pinned to earth.

And when we reached Dormans, on the south bank, turning westward to Chateau-Thierry, we were on ground no less vital, where in July the American troops, in General Pershing's words, wrote the most brilliant page in our military annals.

FAILURE OF THE HUN

The Germans were attempting to cross the river in force between Dormans and Chateau-Thierry, and then to thrust their way down the valley of the Somme to Montmirail, and the great main road to Paris, which passes through that town. A single regiment of the Third American division helped up the enemy on the river bank to the east of Mezy, fighting at the same time east and west against German parties who had managed to get a footing at other points on the south side, and finally counter-attacking, throwing two German divisions into complete confusion, and capturing 600 prisoners.

No episode in the war is more likely to ring in the memory or after times. "In the bend of the Marne at the mouth of the Somme," says Colonel Palmer, "not a German was able to land. In all twenty boats full of the enemy were sunk or sent drifting harmlessly down the stream."

To the east of Mezy, also, four American platoons did incredible things in defense of the Paris-Nancy railway. "They were not going to yield that track alive—that was the simple fact." And their losses were appalling.

In the second platoon of the four engaged all were killed except three who were wounded, and half of the third were down before they had driven the enemy from the embankment. The American graves lie all on the south side of the line—the German on the north.

"We actually took over 400 prisoners between the railroad and the river—the Sixth German grenadier regiment was annihilated. * * * And the Germans never reached the Somme valley, or that Montmirail road on which they had set their hearts. "The deciding factor," says Colonel Palmer, "was the undiminished courage of our men, and their aggressive spirit." And the action, small as were the numbers engaged, could not have been bettered. "It is a military classic."

Over this hard-fought ground, consecrated by the graves of men who had thus bravely—thus early—laid down their lives for a cause of which they had no doubt, we ran on to Chateau-Thierry, and that western flank of the Marne salient, where in June, while the Germans were still pressing south, and in July, when Foch turned upon his trapped foe, the Americans, most of whom were for the first time in real battle, bore themselves to the astonishment and admiration of all the watching allies. In June especially, when matters were at their worst. The capture of Bour-esches and Belleau Wood, the capture of Vaux on July 1, the gallant help which an American machine gun battalion gave the French in covering the French retreat across the bridge at Chateau-Thierry before it was blown up, and failing the German attempts to cross and the German move toward Paris, where perhaps, writes a British military authority, "the most splendid" service, from a military standpoint, the American rendered to the allied cause. It was certainly the first occasion on which they really made themselves felt, and brought home to the Germans the quality of the opposition they were likely to encounter from the American armies.

Mud and Snow Don't Stop Auto Fire Wagons

Madison, May 27.—Whether mud and snow handicap the use of motor fire apparatus in Wisconsin cities has just been reported on, by request, by the municipal reference bureau of the University of Wisconsin.

In response to frequent requests from cities contemplating the purchase of motor apparatus, the bureau sent a letter to the fire chiefs in Wisconsin cities which have such apparatus, asking whether snow or mud caused trouble in answering alarms, whether motor apparatus ever failed to reach a fire, and whether it is necessary to keep horses.

Most of the fire chiefs, while replying that so far the motor apparatus had always been able to respond, indicated hiring teams for special emergencies.

The cities that reported were Appleton, Chippewa Falls, Kenosha, Eau Claire, La Crosse, Manitowish, Milwaukee, Racine, Superior, Wausau and West Allis.

Theoreticalists Up Against It

U. W. HAS TWO NEW MEDICAL BUILDINGS

Madison, May 27.—"Bradley Memorial Hospital" and "University Infirmary" are the names just given by the regents to the newest structures on the campus of the University of Wisconsin. The two structures, which will be completed about July 1, are the first of the new medical group, and are the first buildings on the campus to be erected through private contributions.

The citizens who gave $100,000 and land to be added to the $50,000 appropriated by the legislature are Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Bradley, Madison; and Mrs. C. R. Crane, Chicago; T. P. as B. Brittingham, Madison; Prof. T. Owen, and another who preferred to have his name withheld.

The Bradley Memorial hospital, which is 140 by 41 feet and two stories high, is equipped as a research hospital with chemistry, bacteriology, and serum laboratories, kitchen and rooms for sterilizing, filling, refrigerator, mortuary, and galvanometer. The Sarah Workman memorial ward, physiologic, radiographic and fluoroscopic laboratories, 14 wards, operating and sterilizing rooms and nurses' hall are among its features.

The new infirmary, of the same size, contains kitchen facilities, living and dining rooms, three nurses' bedrooms, baking, drying, sterilizing, tank, and store rooms, and a clinical laboratory, as well as a waiting room, office, physician's room, and operating room.
